

Dieter Dewulf (1972) graduated from Ghent University in 1995 as a master in political science – international relations.

He started his professional career at VisitBruges and was appointed in 1997 as the Project Manager of the European Football championship Euro2000 by the city of Bruges. In 2000 he started working for Brugge2002, Cultural Capital of Europe. He worked as right hand man to the intendant and was responsible for external relations and tourism related projects.

After the European cultural year Dewulf became manager at Westtoer, the provincial enterprise for tourism where he collaborated on various strategic planning projects and tourism investment projects. In 2005 he returned to Visitbruges as general manager. As such he is member of different boards of directors of tourist, cultural and educational organisations. He is also a member of the advisory committee of Visitflanders and gives guest lectures for various universities.